

At Home Kingswood

*'And so to make Life,
and that for ever,
One grand sweet song'*
Charles Kingsley

For some of us, as we get older, dementia erodes the memories and abilities acquired from a lifetime's experience. This is naturally disturbing, both for the sufferer and those that love them. It can happen to anyone and when it does, specialist care is needed. In the right environment however, with encouragement and care from committed, professional people with knowledge and compassion, people with dementia can live happily for many years.

If someone you love has developed dementia, we have the expertise and experience to look after them. Our modern, purpose built specialist dementia unit adjoining Kensington House, Lowestoft has been thoughtfully designed to include many features designed to protect our residents from the vulnerabilities dementia can impose. It is also a very comfortable home, with each room fully equipped and with en-suite, yet very much a home from, home.

With dementia, life slows down and if confusion is to be avoided, the daily routine must be tailored to the needs of the individual. At Kingsley Care Homes we make sure we have the staff and the time to give every one of our residents the individual attention, mental stimulation and respect they need.

If the challenges of dementia are on your mind, arrange to visit us at Kensington House and see for yourself how we might help your loved one cope with both today's and tomorrow's challenges.

Every Kingsley home is a community in itself. Each new resident is encouraged to furnish their room with favourite things, maintaining important memories and creating personal space to enjoy alone or share with visiting family and friends. As with any community, there are a number of places to meet, to talk, to think and to share a full and varied programme of organised activities.

Kingsley Care homes welcome visitors and are always happy to show families round any of their homes. Moving from independent living to a community of like minded people, is not a step to be taken lightly. If you are considering residential care for yourself, a partner or parent, you will be made welcome at any Kingsley care home.
